

ROSÉ CLUB #1

Saint Eulalie Rosé

Redolent with the scents of ripe strawberries, raspberries, melons, and herbs, one is immediately enchanted. Better still, this wine offers juicy flavors and a real mouthful of wine to satisfy the palate, without sacrificing elegance or freshness. A true crowd pleaser from start to finish, it captures the savory scents and flavors of southern France. Retail $19.99

Varietal: Pinot Noir

Appellation: Russian River Valley, California

PINOT CLUB #2

Dom. Jacques Girardin

A touch of toasty, smoky oak accents ripe, aromatic, red cherry on the nose of this wine. The slender palate also has a mellow, ripe texture, countered by bright freshness. Smooth, fine tannins become apparent on the finish and bode well for the evolution of this elegant wine.

EXPLORER CLUB #2

Eva

Bright, pale straw-yellow, even colour throughout. The nose is softly full, elegantly layered aromas unfolding, passionfruit, guava melded with sweet floral. Medium-bodied, soft nuances of guava, passionfruit entwined with citrus, elderflowers and saline. The palate is ethereally smooth-flowing and soft, carries finely chalky minerals across the palate; accompanied by integrated acidity, flows with good energy to a supple, lightly-fragranced finish. This is a textural Sauvignon Blanc showing attractive minerals and acidity, underlying supporting features of floral and tropical fruit.

Jean-Luc Colombo Woman Winemaker: Laure Colombo

Laure is the second generation at this family owned winery established in 1984. Her dream was to travel, and that she did before coming back to the family estate in the Rhone Valley. Through travel, Laure learned about her roots.

After she obtained a degree in commerce, she spent time working in the United States honing her skills. A stint in India followed her experiences in the USA. She returned to France to become an intern at Château Haut-Brion and earn her Bachelor's degree in Viticulture and Oenology in Bordeaux. Later she obtained her masters in Oenology from the University of Montpellier. It was in 2010 that Laure officially came home to join her family's winery. In addition, she and her husband have their own label, Domain de Lorient.

The Colombo family has taken a very active role in protecting bees. A portion of their Côte de Rhône wines goes to the UC Davis Department of Entomology for research.

Chateau Ste. Eulalie Woman Winemaker: Isabel Coustel

Isabelle Coustal is the owner of Chateau Ste. Eulalie along with her husband, Laurent. Both Isabelle and Laurent have degrees in oenology from the University of Bordeaux. They purchased the chateau in 1996 after their graduation. Isabelle participates in all the winemaking decisions and is entirely responsible for the commercial operations of the business and she works the harvest. She is also the face of the business as she represents the chateau at wine shows and travels abroad to visit their export markets. Isabel and Laurent have three children, now grown and not involved in the family wine business at this time.

Summer Water Woman Winemaker: Erica Blumenthal & Nikki Haganir

In the summer of 2013, friends Erica Blumenthal and Nikki Haganir found themselves transfixed by the Provence rosés they were enjoying together. They were in awe of the beautiful pale pink hue, delightfully crisp taste, and how perfectly it paired with their favorite summertime activities. Constantly cracking each other up with rosé-related jokes, like calling it "Summer Water," they started an Instagram account with rosé as their muse.

With backgrounds in fashion and design, the popular photoblog developed into a brand when they made their signature logo tote bag and has grown to include t-shirts, a beach towel, and several product collaborations. In May 2015, they released the first vintage of their rosé made in partnership with Winc, a dry Provence-style wine appropriately named Summer Water.

Domaine Jacques Girardin Woman Winemaker: Valerie Girardin

Valerie Girardin is involved with all aspects of the domaine along with her husband, Jacques, and her son, Justin. Justin joined the domaine after apprenticing in Tasmania. This is a classic model of a Burgundy domaine: husband, wife and son. Valerie works in the vineyards and at harvest and is actively involved in all the winemaking decisions. She is responsible for all the commercial activity of the domaine and receives all the visitors. Both she and Jacques are from wine grower families in Burgundy. Their marriage created a 17-hectare domaine, a significant size by Burgundy standards.

Woman Winemaker Bios

Flowers Winery Woman Winemaker: Chantal Forthun

Chantal Forthun, Director of Winemaking, has led the winemaking team at Flowers Vineyards & Winery since 2012. She and her team source Chardonnay and Pinot Noir from estate vineyards and other family-owned vineyards throughout the cool Sonoma Coast. They use minimal intervention in the winery to let the remarkable character of this fruit shine through.

"Each vintage gives us a fresh opportunity to attentively farm our Sonoma Coast vineyards and take these grapes from vine to bottle. At Flowers, "minimal intervention" doesn't mean hands-off; it actually means more hands are involved in the preparation, requiring us to be present in each moment, through every step of the process."

Chantal has made wine at Oak Ridge Winery, Rhys Vineyards, and Bonny Doon Vineyard—where, under Randall Graham, she learned biodynamic farming and natural winemaking in the creation of their terroir-driven wines. A stint at Quartz Reef Winery in the Central Otago region of New Zealand sparked the passion for Pinot Noir and Chardonnay that she brings to her role at Flowers.

Chantal is a California native, having grown up surrounded by agriculture in the Central Valley. She holds degrees in Biology and Botany from Chico State. Just a few weeks into her first winemaking job, while barrel fermenting Chardonnay, Chantal knew she'd found the right vocation—one that engages all the senses, involves science, art, and physical labor, and inspires camaraderie through close teamwork.

Point Reyes Woman Cheesemakers:

In 1959, Bob and Dean Giacomini established their successful dairy farm just north of Point Reyes Station in Marin County, CA. In 2000, together with their daughters, the family began making hand-crafted cheese on the farm with milk from their own herd of Holsteins. In 2010, now 100% Women-Owned by sisters Diana, Lynn and Jill, they opened The Fork, a culinary and educational center offering farm-to-table educational experiences for both consumers and the trade. In 2018 the company expanded to Petaluma, with the opening of a second creamery, warehouse and distribution center. The Point Reyes product line consisting of Toma, TomaTruffle, TomaProvence, TomaRashi, Bay Blue, Gouda and Original Blue, is available nationally at independent cheese shops and specialty grocers, at the Fork, local-area farmers' markets and online at www.pointreyescheese.com.

Dom. Les Fines Graves Woman Winemaker: Evelyn Janodet

Evelyn Janodet is the wife of the late Jacky Janodet. She comes from a wine producing farming family in the northern section of Beaujolais. After their marriage, she and Jacky created the Domaine des Fines Graves in Romaneche, the area of Moulin a Vent. After Jacky's death 10 years ago, she ran the domaine with her son, Jerome. Together they did the work in the vineyards and at harvest. Jerome was responsible for the winemaking and Evelyn took care of all the commercial aspects of the business. Today she is essentially retired but helps to receive visitors and conducts tastings at the domaine. She is the sister of Yvette Noblet, our supplier of Pouilly-Fuisse.

Eva Pemper Woman Winemaker: Eva Pemper

Eva Pemper is a Croatian winemaker, now living in NZ. She arrived in New Zealand in 2012 following her dream to travel, meet people and make wine around the world. Eva holds a master's degree in winemaking from Agriculture University in Zagreb, Croatia and a Graduate Diploma in Oenology from EIT, Hawke's Bay.

In 2019, Eva started EP Wines Ltd with her business partner who owns a vineyard in Marlborough on the beautiful north-facing Wither Hills." Eva Pemper" brand's portfolio consists of a Single Vineyard Chardonnay, Single Vineyard Sauvignon Blanc and a Rosé.

Mollydooker Woman Winemaker: Sarah Marquis

Sarah began her career with a degree in winemaking and after building many successful wine brands, she founded Mollydooker. With a focus on the vineyard and a flair for creativity, Sarah and her wines have earned numerous awards both locally and internationally. When she's not busy tasting wines, her passion through Mollydooker is to support and help their three major charities. Today, the mother of the real-life Blue-Eyed Boy and the Gigglepote will introduce herself in true Mollydooker style, with a left-hand shake.

1750 Woman Winemaker: Maria Eldy Contrera

The name of the winery, "1750," is the altitude—in METERS—of the vineyard it is sourced from. All the wines of 1750 are from a single vineyard, planted on an incline and sit between 1700 and 1800 meters above sea level.

Winemaker, Maria Eldy Contrera is 'a trained chemist of indigenous heritage [and] learned how to make wine on the job. With each year her confidence grew and so did the quality. And now this incredible woman from humble beginnings makes wines featured in Michelin-starred restaurants. She is now head of the winery and continues to grow her all-women team.'

The 1750 labels don the image of a woman of the Guarani Tribe—a tribute to the native people whose women were revered as fierce and noble warriors, one of the few tribes not conquered by the Spaniards. This was a tribe where women fought alongside men.

The 1750 Tannat is a pride of Bolivia, highlighted in restaurants and prize-winning shops, in France, Switzerland, Luxembourg and the USA. Recently, the famed wine expert Dave McIntyre, columnist for the Washington Post, rated it at ☆☆ ½

[Excellent/Extraordinary].
